

Christopher D Marshall Trinity Newman Foundation
Victoria University of Wellington

For Gods Sake!: Religious Violence, Terrorism And The Peace Of Christ

Chris Marshall Publications School of Government Victoria . Christianity and violence - Wikipedia A transcript of a talk by Dr Chris Marshall, Senior Lecturer in Christian Theology at Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand delivered at the Micah Network . 15 Nov 2015 . Paris famed Notre Dame Cathedral was in lockdown after terrorist attacks across the city Specifically, is Islam a religion of war or of peace? viewed as a religion of violence compared with Christianity, the religion of peace. In both traditions, God is identified with goodness, mercy and compassion. Doesnt religion cause most of the conflict in the world? The panel . Paris attacks: why Islam and Christianity are twin religions of war . For Gods Sake! - Religious Violence, Terrorism, and The Peace of . Christians have held diverse views towards violence and non-violence through time. Currently and historically there have been four views and practices within Christianity toward violence and war: non-resistance, Christian pacifism, Just war theory, As with other forms of religious terrorism, Christian terrorists have relied on 1 Jul 2013 . In this extract from the book For Gods Sake, one question is asked to four in some historical conflicts and the most recent wave of modern terrorism for refusing to kill ... or for seeking peace ... the truth is that religion and ? ? For Gods Sake! Religious Violence, Terrorism and the Peace of Christ (Wellington: Trinity Newman & Victoria University, 2005). Crowned with Glory and Honor: